The unique culinary art of Dim Sum

In Cantonese, "dim sum" literally means "a light touch on the heart", which is an ideal way to describe the small, delicious savoury dishes. "Yum cha" means "drink tea" and the two expressions are used interchangeably, as dim sum is traditionally served alongside a cuppa.

SHOPHOUSE DINING

Throughout Asia, shophouses are a place for family, friends and neighbours to gather and eat.

Their characteristics have defined the urban architecture of towns across Asia for the last 200 years and their early style was a mix of cross cultural ideas and traditions of both the local builders and immigrants. Tootoomoo celebrates this as we marry Asian influences with our eclectic London surroundings. The inspiration for our restaurant comes from the bustling street markets of Asia, with our open kitchen and signature shophouse style. All dishes are served as soon as they are ready without prejudice, in keeping with a true shophouse experience. We offer a casual dining menu where dishes are best shared!
